INDEX OF SURNAMES

HISTORY OF FREDERICK COUNTY, MARYLAND,
(Williams-McKinsey)

Gleaners in genealogical fields often are handicapped for want of an index to the family names contained in historical and genealogical works.

A name casually introduced into a biographical sketch or narrative of local historical events may be the clue leading to the uncovering of valuable data.

In the History of Frederick County, especially in the biographical volume, thousands of these names are buried.

1390157

They are presented herewith after a labor of some years, intermittently and sometimes regretfully performed, but always with the hope that some may find the result a convenience.

Since a great many of the surnames in this index are of Teutonic origin it would be wise to seek the various spellings of any given name.

Remember that the "t" and "d" in German are nearly the same phonetically and are liable to strange misuse. For instance Dutrow, Dudrow, Dudderar, Dutterer, Duttera, Tuttere, Tutterer, Tottero are all variations of the original Duddra. Maclefish is the present day McElfresh, and so on ad infinitum. Beware also of the "v" and "f".

Many of the distortions of both German and Anglo-Saxon names are due to court and other civil clerks who set down the names phonetically, each in his own individual style and fancy, often as pronounced on lips of dialect-speaking Germans who could not read or write in any language.

Apologies are offered for the somewhat unattractive and sometimes nearly illegible typography.

The name Devilbiss occurs in Frederick county church and civil records beginning about 1745. The original immigrants were three brothers who arrived from the Rhine region on the ship Britannia, Sept. 21, 1731, landing at Philadelphia. Their names were Michael, George, and Casper, the latter under sixteen. Two settled in Frederick county, one in Pennsylvania, the latter branch spelling the name Dreibelbiss. Other spellings are Teufelbiss, probably the original; DeVilbiss, Devil, Teufel, Divilbiss. Casper seems to be the ancestor of most of the Frederick county members of the family, his grandson Alexander going to Ohio in 1821 and founded the town of Alexander. Mr. Thos. DeVilbiss, of Fort Wayne, Indiana, has compiled a partial history of the family, treating mostly of the Ohio branch.

Rensburgh, 550. This name and its variations of Rensburg, Rensberg, Rensbarger, Renspack, etc., are found from earliest records of Frederick county. Stephen Rensburg, captain of militia in the Indian wars, was the son of Stephen and was born in Lorraine in 1711 and came from Pennsylvania in about 1732. All of the name in Pennsylvania and Maryland are descended from Stephen or his two nephews who came over a few years later. The Rensburgs intermarried with the Dittows, Devilbisses, Johnson, Traile, Kirchbain, and other early settlers.

 Shanam, 643
 Shaner, 631. This family name occurs frequently around Shepherds-town, W. Va. George Shaner, the Revolutionary soldier, resided there. Scotch-Irish origin. There is a family tradition that descent can be traced from the father of Lady Jane Seymour.
